The Basye Legacy

Bowling Green's First Settler Had Broad Impact

BY BRENT ENGEL

CONTRIBUTING WRITER Editor's note: Following is the final part of a story series by contributing writer Brent Engel

The man who founded Bowling Green also was part of a monumental moment in American history.

John Walter Basye (pronounced BAY-zee) participated in the official transfer of the Louisiana Purchase from France to the United States on March 10, 1804. It was the second of two ceremonies, and it almost doubled the nation's size nine weeks from departing with William Clark and others on their Corps of Discovery up the Missouri River – and Army commander Amos Stoddard signed the paperwork. Basye and a friend, John Allen, raised the American flag, the first U.S. banner officially raised west of the Mississippi. The noon ceremony at the territorial governor's mansion would have been more boisterous had those attending not been tuckered out. "Someone called for three cheers, but after all the celebrating the night before, people were exhausted and the response was not hearty," wrote author Walter Barlow Stevens.

giving birth to a boy, Seth. and expensive," the family Before the year was out, history noted. "The ends of Basye married South Carolina native Ann Templeton. They would have four more children.

Louisiana was a teenager when the family arrived in Pike County, settling on land that in 2023 is occupied by the Louisiana Public Library at Third and Tennessee streets.

There are at least three differing stories as to whether Louisiana Basye truly was the inspiration for the city's name. The most common explanation is that the land pur-Meriwether Lewis – just chase, not the girl, was the the logs were trimmed or mortised so as to fit into each other and then held fast by wooden pins fitted into holes bored through the ends.'

It would be the last place Basye lived, but his penchant for improvements would never wane. He dug a cistern so that water would not have to be hauled daily from a spring a few blocks away, built a smokehouse to cure meats and added an exterior storage basement.

A barn was put up near the house. "No nails were used, and even the door hinges were made of wood," the history book said.

Basye was honored to participate, but a more exuberant delight awaited.

A 'ROLLICKING' GIRL

It was a birth that seemed guided by providence.

On Dec. 20, 1804 – a year to the date of the first Louisiana Purchase transfer ceremony in New Orleans -Basye and his wife, Agnes, welcomed their fourth child, a daughter they called "Louisiana."

She was born in St. Louis County, and the name commemorated the land deal. A family history said she was a "rollicking" girl. The following year, Basye apparently traveled with Zebulon Pike on part of his ex-ploration of the Upper Mississippi – which included stops in Pike County - but returned to St. Louis after getting to Hurricane Island near what is now the border of Iowa, Illinois and Wisconsin.

The pathfinder was described in the family history as being "a broad shouldered, muscular man" who stood "about 5 feet 11 inches" in height – taller than many men of the era. "He was never sick until the last two days of his life," the book said.

Tragedy struck the family on March 31, 1814, when Agnes died, two months after origin, although the family history disagrees.

Another account argues that a storekeeper's journal was the source. The third says local leaders were motivated by a different lass, Lucinda Walker, daughter of community co-founder John Walker

The Basye family history, however, says the notion is incorrect because Lucinda "had married John Venable nearly a year before and had moved away. Besides, the names are not alike."

With all due respect to the Walker family, Lucinda, Missouri, probably would not have caught on.

MOVING ON

The pioneer spirit that had brought Basye from Kentucky to Illinois and Missouri did not wane.

Pike County was formally organized on Dec. 14, 1818. Nine days later, Basve filed for land at what would become Bowling Green. In 1820, the family moved to a log home there after selling the Louisiana property.

"His house was not only his home, but it was the preaching place of the early pioneers of Methodism," the family history says. "He was the Methodist class leader and taught the first Sunday School ever held in Bowling Green."

The book records that Basye also was the first "postmaster, coroner, inn keeper and jailer." Drawing its name from the city in Kentucky, Bowling Green quickly attracted other settlers. It was designated the county seat in 1823. On Oct. 4 of that year, Louisiana married Bowling Green farmer David Love Tombs. It is credited as the first nuptials performed in the community. The couple would have eight children.

Basye's letter handling days came to an end when Andrew Jackson was elected president, but in 1828 he opened a mill. The following year, he built a new home.

"No nails were used in its construction, because nails in that day were all hand made

In addition to other duties, Basye was a county land commissioner. Always true to the Methodist church, he penned an account in 1840 of missionary work in Missouri.

Basye admitted that some of what he witnessed in the 1790s "was entirely new to me" and that while he "did there feel the Spirit of God striving with me...I did not yield." Though he remained reverent, it wasn't until 1807 that he "embraced religion."

Basye had two elderly black people living on his farm, Daniel and Jemima Logan. He "bought" them at an auction, but the family history makes clear that Basye freed them.

"They were not slaves, as John Walter Basye was opposed to slavery," it offers. They lived by themselves in a log cabin on his farm. They were highly respected by all the family.'

Basye was 75 when he died at 8 a.m. on May 25, 1845. The Democratic Banner newspaper said he passed without a groan or struggle, leaving a bright testamentary that he was going to rest."

Basye had made it clear he wasn't afraid of passing to the afterlife and that "he was just waiting the Lord's will," the paper added.

One last thing

Bowling Green honored John Walter Basye's descendants during the city's bicentennial June 27 to July 1.

Almost 100 years ago, a member of another dynamic Pike County family may have summed up the Basye legacy best.

Genevieve Clark was the wife of U.S. Speaker of the House and presidential candidate Champ Clark. Always succinct, she wrote a tribute in 1925.

"The Basye family looms large in the history of Pike County, especially that part of it which spells Bowling Green."

One hundred and three high school students participated in the 60th annual Missouri Electric Cooperative Youth Tour to Washington, D.C., June 12-18.

Local delegate sponsored by Cuivre River Electric Cooperative were Bailey Schneider, Leah Guss, Alexis Kennon, Olivia Ketterer and Gravce Knisell, all from Warrenton High School; and Audrey Lovell, Bowling Green High School.

The seven-day tour provides an action-filled week for high school students, offering them opportunities to learn firsthand what it is like to be involved in politics, leadership positions, community service and today's pressing issues.

"The Youth Tour is the highlight of the summer for many students and we're proud to send our best and the delegations from five other brightest to our nation's capital to participate," said Chris Massman, vice president of Member Services for the Association of Missouri Electric Cooperatives. "Each of these delegates will meet someone or see something that inspires them, and in some cases will create a path to their future career.'

Highlights of the trip include the Missouri delegates visiting with representatives from their congressional districts, touring monuments, the Smithsonian Institution's museums, Arlington National Cemetery and the International Špy Museum. The group also took a sightseeing and dance cruise on the Potomac River one evening with states. Other events of the week included participation in the Electric Youth Day, during which a special program coordinated by the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association brought together over 1,000 Youth Tour delegates from across the United States. The delegates enjoyed featured speeches by government leaders and motivational speakers, such as Mike Schlappi, an inspiring fourtime Paralympic medalist and two-time world wheelchair basketball champion.

OBITUARIES

arry G. Grinstead

Larry G. Grinstead, 73, died Friday, June 23, 2023, in Springfield, with family by his side.

He was a husband, father, Grampa, brother, uncle, teacher, business partner, volunteer, friend, and so much more. There is no way to adequately capture how much love and respect he earned during his life in this obituary.

He was born July 23, 1949, in Monticello, Ark., the son of Pat and Billie Grinstead, with his family eventually moving to Bowling Green. He was a 1967 graduate of Bowling Green High School and a 1971 graduate of the University of Missouri-Columbia where he received an accounting degree.

On July 23, 1971, he married his high school sweetheart, Mary Jane Bunten. Mary Jane and Larry loved each other deeply and were so close it was hard for others to say one name without the other. Theirs is a classic and beautiful love story that resulted in two children, two in-laws, and two grandchildren over more than 50 years.

Larry's work in public accounting led his family to Springfield in 1978. The vast majority of his professional accounting career was spent with Baird, Kurtz, and Dobson (BKD) where he was a partner until his "first" retirement. Not only did he consider his business partners co-workers, but many of them also became lifelong friends and confidants. He was proud of those he mentored and respected those who mentored him. He fondly told many stories from his accounting days and mentioned more names than we can put here. He taught his children through experiences he gained in his first career.

After his first retirement Larry went back to school at Missouri State and in 2000 earned a teaching credential in High School Math. He then began a 10-year career teaching math at Springfield Catholic High School. His hard-working nature, humor, musicianship, and love of teaching shone brightly during this time. One of his signature techniques was inventing songs to help students learn math facts.

He did so many things above and beyond work. In addition to being a family man, he was a tireless volunteer, an avid traveler, a ham radio enthusiast, a church choir member, and a barbershopper.

As a traveler, he and Mary Jane took annual vacations with the family when their children Mike and Laura were young. After the first retirement he and Mary Jane took RV trips across the country. He was proud to have visited 48 National Parks along with innumerable other monuments, seashores, and historical sites.

It was from his father, Pat, that he developed a love for ham radio, which he cultivated throughout the years. WA0JZK was his call sign, and his voice was heard worldwide as he cultivated "contacts" for radio contests and fun. He was a member of the Nixa Ham Radio Club.

Larry was an avid volunteer. He tutored math for high school equivalency students at Ozarks Technical Community College. He was a devoted advocate for the disadvantaged through Saint Vincent de Paul. As one friend wrote, "Larry had such faith and was an inspiration to others." He was a lifelong Christian, converting to Catholicism early in his marriage and continuing as a leader and advocate for the Catholic community in the Diocese of Springfield-Cape Girardeau.

Larry always put others first. Even in his final hours he wrote out instructions for how to help his grandchildren. He had a way of making everyone feel comfortable and heard. He always had an ear for those who needed one. He will be missed.

Survivors include his wife, Mary Jane; a son, Mike Grinstead and wife, Stefanie of Sacramento, Calif.; one daughter, Laura Reynolds and husband, Mark of Overland Park, Kan.; grandchildren, Jake and Alex Grinstead of Sacramento, Calif.; and a brother, Jim Grinstead and wife, Linda of Nashville, Tenn.

He was preceded in death by his parents.

Visitation was at Gorman-Scharpf Funeral Home on Thursday from 5-7 p.m., beginning with a prayer service.

Funeral service was at 10 a.m., Friday at Holy Trinity Catholic Church in Springfield. Interment was at St. Clement Church Cemetery at a later date.

Service was livestreamed at https://www.facebook.com/alloccasionvideo/?ref=page internal.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations to the Shepherds Fund for Springfield Catholic Schools, 2340 S.
