Bowling Green Police Chief On Administration Leave

By BRICE CHANDLER
EDITOR

The City of Bowling Green confirmed last week that Police Chief Josh Langley has been put on administrative leave.

"We cannot release the reason as it is a personnel matter," City Administrator, Linda Luebrecht said. "There is no replacement at this time."

Langley has been with BGPD since 2020 and was hired as chief in June 2022. He replaced Darin Chance who was hired by the city in November 2021 after long-time chief Don Nacke retired.

Langley is a Bowling Green native and 2005 graduate of Bowling Green High School. Prior to working for Bowling Green, Langley worked at the Pike County Sheriff's Office in dispatch and the jail. Shortly after that, he became a deputy before taking a busy three-year stint with the Louisiana Police Department.

There were no other comments from city hall about the situation.

"Bowling Green is so proud to announce Josh Langley as our new Chief of Police for our great city," Mayor

Jim Arico said of Langley in 2022 when he made chief. "Josh is an out-standing police officer with an impeccable record and reputation. We are very fortunate to have him. Chief Langley will bring organization and a higher level of police performance as he leads the Bowling Green Police Department!"

According to the Luebrecht, Captain Bennie Church is second in command and will head up the department for the time being. We will update as more information becomes available.

NECC's Rolando Among Fallen Law Enforcement Officers Honored At Capitol

By BRICE CHANDLER
EDITOR

On Saturday, May 4, members of Missouri's law enforcement community from across the state gathered at the State Capitol to honor four fallen officers who paid the ultimate price for their service. The names of the officers have been added to the memorial's Wall of Honor.

Northeast Correctional Center's Kelly Rolando was amongst those names.

Rolando had served 8 years as a correctional officer with the Missouri Department of Corrections when he tragically lost his life in a head-on collision on Highway 54 Bypass in Mexico, Mo. The Oct. 22, 2023 accident happened as he was returning to the Northeast Correctional Center in Bowling Green after an assignment in Columbia.

The ceremony, which normally takes place outside, at the Missouri Law Enforcement Memorial, was moved to the Capitol Rotunda because of the threat of inclement weather.

Lt. Governor Mike Kehoe and Attorney General Andrew Bailey were among the speakers at the annual memorial service held on the first Saturday in May.

"It takes great courage, strength, and commitment for law enforcement officers to put on their uniform each day knowing that their duty requires them to run toward the dangers that others flee," Lieutenant Governor Mike Kehoe. "We can never repay the immense debt we owe those who made the ultimate sacrifice to protect us, but we are eternally grateful for their selfless service and vow to continue to support their families and loved ones."

"The 746 officers' names inscribed on Missouri's Law Enforcement Memorial represent the very best of us - a legacy of heroic service to protect Missourians, despite the risks," Attorney General Andrew Bailey said. "Today, we send the message to those in law enforcement who work to protect us every day that we have their backs."

Each year, the families of law enforcement officers who have died in the line of duty the previous year, and through the decades, participate in the ceremony by placing white carnations in a wreath in honor of Missouri's fallen heroes.

On Friday, May 3, a candlelight vigil was held at the Law Enforcement Memorial in remembrance of all Missouri law enforcement officers who made the ultimate sacrifice. Governor Mike Parson ordered that the Capitol dome and Law Enforcement Memorial to be lighted blue on Friday night in honor of fallen law enforcement officers. Friday was also Law Enforcement Appreciation Day in Missouri.

"We owe a tremendous debt to the officers who made the ultimate sacrifice while enforcing the law and answering the call to service," Governor Parson said. "Each year, we hold these ceremonies to remember and honor those who lost their lives in service to our state. We are proud to light the Capitol Dome and Missouri Law Enforcement Memorial blue, as we stand alongside the families and colleagues of our fallen heroes to express our gratitude for their selfless service to our state."

Missouri 4-H Foundation Celebrates 75 Years Of Empowering Youth

The Missouri 4-H Foundation marks its 75th anniversary this year with plans to highlight impacts from decades of dedication to nurturing young leaders and fostering community development across the state.

Celebrations will include recognition of individuals and programs supported by the foundation, as well as opportunities for friends of 4-H to come together, said Rachel Augustine, director of the Missouri 4-H Foundation.

"Over the past 75 years, the Missouri 4-H Foundation has been instrumental in empowering generations of young people to become confident, capable and compassionate leaders," Augustine said. "As we celebrate this momentous occasion, we reflect on our rich history of service and look forward to the countless opportunities that lie ahead as we continue to inspire and empower Missouri's youth."

Since its establishment in 1949, the Missouri 4-H Foundation has empowered youths through innovative programs, hands-on experiences and mentorship opportunities. The Missouri 4-H Foundation offers more than 70 college scholarships to young people of all backgrounds and provides direct program support to the University of Missouri Extension 4-H Center for Youth Development. The Foundation also manages a group of endowments underpinning the future of 4-H programs across Missouri.

"Missouri has more than 50,000 4-H members, as well as thousands of volunteers, donors and professional staff representing every county in our state," Augustine said. "With nearly 1,200 4-H clubs and strong partnerships across communities, 4-H continues to have a positive impact on the social, emotional and physical success of our young people - and the adults who support them."

Founded on the principles of leadership, citizenship and service, the Missouri 4-H Foundation has remained steadfast in its commitment to providing young people with the resources, skills and support necessary to thrive in an ever-changing world, Augustine said.

As the Missouri 4-H Foundation looks forward in its mission of empowering youth to reach their full potential and become catalysts for positive change in their communities, the opportunities are great, she said. A recent study by National 4-H Council found that 4-H alumni are three times more likely to participate in community service and twice as likely to have the goal of being a leader.

Through agricultural education, STEM initiatives, leadership development, community service projects and more, the Missouri 4-H Foundation has adapted to meet the evolving needs of Missouri's youths, ensuring they are well-equipped to succeed in the 21st century and beyond. Learn more about the Missouri 4-H Foundation, its leadership and upcoming events such as the Clover Classic Golf Tournament at 4h.missouri.edu/foundation.

Eight Minutes

President Packs Punch Into Louisiana Speech

By BRENT ENGEL
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

Editor's note: Following is the final in a two-part story series.

Unlike presidential appearances in the 21st century, there were no protestors to disrupt or disrespect Theodore Roosevelt when he visited Louisiana in 1903.

"The good order which prevailed throughout the day was another feature of which we feel proud," the Pike County News wrote. "Not a disturbance occurred and not an accident happened to mar the harmony and pleasure of the occasion and not a partial of partisan feeling was exhibited. The people recognized the president as their chief servant and honored him therefor."

A crowd estimated at 7,000 to 10,000 people was "anxious to get up close so that they could hear and see," added the Louisiana Press. It was "certainly an honor and credit to all concerned that the event passed off as nicely and satisfactorily as it did."

Roosevelt's speech, which lasted eight minutes, was well-received, but newspapers noted one slight bit of disappointment. Teddy apparently didn't get his shoes dirty.

"It cannot be said that the president touched the soil of Old Pike for he walked upon an elegant Brussels carpet which (local business) Wald Bros. furnished for the occasion," The Press said.

Roosevelt acted as if he didn't want to leave, because handlers had to tell him it was time to get on his train on go to St. Louis. The president told Louisiana Business Association representative Bert S. Carrick that he appreciated the "hearty good will shown him by our people," the Press added.

"Good bye and good luck," Roosevelt said as the train lurched south from the station.

Others accompanying the President in addition to Democrat Congressman Champ Clark of Bowling Green and Carrick included former Pike County Republican Congressman and U.S. Attorney David Patterson Dyer, who would be appointed a federal judge by Roosevelt in 1907; former Louisiana city attorney, Pike County prosecutor and Missouri State Senator David A. Ball, a law partner of Clark's who would run unsuccessfully for governor in 1908; and attorney, bank president and La Crosse Lumber Company executive Charles G. Buffum.

The party also included Roosevelt's Secretary of the Treasury, Leslie Shaw, a former Iowa governor; Surgeon General Presley Rixey; and Presidential Secretary William Loeb Jr.

Newspapers noted that the train included a library, smoking rooms, an observation area, private office and barber in addition to a dining area, sleeping quarters and restrooms.

"Every convenience of the executive mansion is at his hand," the Press reported.

The reception committee included Louisiana Mayor John Cole and 90 other residents, along with dozens of people from other Pike County communities. There were also committees on decorations, grounds and platform, music, advertising and guard of honor.

In a letter to Carrick the next day, Dyer thanked "the people of Pike County for the splendid reception accorded the President" and offered appreciation to the reception volunteers.

"Your appointments were splendidly arranged and executed, and the members of your several committees performed their duties with great care and dignity," Dyer said.

Roosevelt was "greatly pleased (and so expressed himself on the train) with the splendid reception accorded him at Louisiana," Dyer continued. "The hospitality for which Pike County is noted was never better illustrated than it was yesterday. The loyalty of all our people to the government and their respect for the President without regard to party, is the surest guarantee of the perpetuity of our free institutions."

Dyer finished by asking God to bless America and "save it for our children and their descendants to the remotest generation."

From The Mayor's Desk...

I missed Missouri Line-worker Appreciation Day, so, many thanks to those who braved the cold harsh weather this past winter. Thanks to the men and women who repaired and replaced downed lines, poles, transformers and restored power to tens of thousands of customers for warmth, comfort, and convenience. They work in hot weather also to be proactive and expand services to millions of Missourians and here locally.

Quite a few Bowling Green citizens have asked me about bicycling and the lack of bicycle lanes, markings, spotty sidewalks, and bike stands in the parks and around the City. Bicyclists tell me it is very scenic in and around Bowling Green, but safety is a major concern. This is another area and need for more sidewalks, bike lane markings, and city-wide connectivity as we continue to develop as a city which meets the needs of our citizens beyond infrastructure.

May is also Mental Health Awareness Month, and a great deal of thanks and appreciation goes to those who work in this and related professions. These are much needed and extremely expanding agencies as crime, violence, drug usage, domestic violence, and abuses of all types are exponentially increasing as more and more illegal aliens are entering our country.

Thanks to all who participated and supported Walk for Life and BBQ this past Saturday in the big park. Bowling Green seniors have finished their last high school classes and requirements and are ready for Graduation and then stepping into their future! Congratulations seniors! Go out and make your dreams come true and then come back to Bowling Green to raise your families, open businesses, build manufacturing and industry, start musical, theatrical, and cultural organizations that expand our experiences and increase our quality of life in our wonderful city!

On May 7, National Teachers Day was recognized, celebrated, and acknowledged for the crucial role teachers and para-teachers play in not only educating but modeling the importance of education and development for every student. Thank you, educators, for forming and molding our young students' minds to be all they can be!

June 1 is Bowling Green's City-wide yard/garage sale. If you or your neighborhood would like to advertise your yard sale, you can come to City Hall, give location posted on a city-wide map and these maps will be available for yard sale goers. The BG Park Board will be organizing and developing these maps so one does not have to roam around the city. Saturday, June 8 is Wings and Wheels at the Bowling Green Municipal Airport. Come and bring your car, truck, motorcycle, side-by-side and show off your vehicle, check out the various airplanes, enjoy vendors and their foods, and be entertained by remote-controlled airplanes, cars, helicopters, plus police cars and firetrucks! Vehicle entering is free along with a "free Car and Airplane Show!"

Senior citizens are still gathering at the High Rise on Champ Clark Drive and have expanded hours to 2:00 in the afternoon. Come and see and experience fun fellowship.

Rep. Chad Perkins

COMBATING ILLEGAL SQUATTING
"Protecting the rights of lawful property owners against squatters is essential for preserving property rights and maintaining order in our communities. This is a timely bill, given what has been happening in our country." Perkins said upon perfection.

Squatters who unlawfully occupy vacant properties can cause significant damage, accrue unpaid utility bills, and create safety hazards. Squatters also strain law enforcement resources as their removal often requires lengthy legal proceedings. Perkins concluded, "Clear laws allowing expedited eviction of squatters and criminal penalties for trespassing are necessary deterrents."

PROTECTING LIFE
HB 2634 will prohibit abortion clinics from receiving Medicaid reimbursements. It bars the use of public funds, including Medicaid reimbursements, to support abortion facilities or their affiliates. The bill also grants taxpayers and the Attorney General the authority to enforce these provisions through legal action.

Additionally, the bill amends existing statutes to mandate that MO HealthNet participants can only use services from qualified providers. It empowers the Department of Social Services to terminate contracts with providers deemed unqualified due to specific offenses. Furthermore, it prohibits reimbursement to abortion facilities under the "Uninsured Women's Health Program."

Upon the bill's passage, Rep. Perkins stated, "Public funds should never be utilized for these purposes. I'm proud to have supported this legislation, and I'm pleased to see it reach the governor's desk."

SUPPORTING OUR MILITARY COMMUNITY

SB 912 is a comprehensive bill aimed at supporting the military community in Missouri. It includes several provisions to assist active-duty personnel, veterans, and members of the National Guard.

abling a full state tax deduction for military and National Guard enlistment and re-enlistment bonuses. This financial incentive recognizes the sacrifices made by those serving in the armed forces.

The bill also seeks to simplify the process for veterans to obtain handicap placards for their vehicles, streamlining the application process and reducing bureaucratic hurdles. Additionally, it covers expenses for military specialty license plates for veterans, making it easier for them to display their service proudly.

Recognizing the importance of mental health support, SB 912 mandates collaboration between the Missouri Veterans Commission and the Department of Mental Health to combat veteran suicide. This initiative aims to provide essential resources and support services to veterans struggling with mental health issues.

Notably, the bill extends benefits to veterans who served on active duty or in the National Guard between 2001 and 2021. It streamlines procedures for disabled veterans, allowing them to present VA documentation instead of requiring alternative paperwork to the DMV to verify their disability status, simplifying the process.

Overall, SB 912 demonstrates a comprehensive approach to supporting Missouri's military community, addressing various aspects of their needs, including financial incentives, accessibility, recognition, and mental health support.

Missouri Supports Texas in Securing the Border

MO SUPPORTS TEXAS IN SECURING THE BORDER

HB 2016 was signed into law on Wednesday, May 8, as Governor Parson traveled to the southern border in Texas to receive an update on Missouri personnel deployed to the border in support of Operation Lone Star. During the visit, the Governor signed HB 2016, the supplemental appropriations bill that funds the deployment, into law.

The deployment strategy involves implementing rotating shifts for National Guard members and dispatching highway patrol troopers equipped with standard law enforcement gear, all of whom have volunteered for the mission. In line with these efforts, the Missouri General Assembly approved a $2.2 million supplemental budget request to support border security initiatives and replenish the Governor's emergency response fund.

Letter To The Editor

Dear Editor,

My mom tells me when I was little, I was what-was-known-as "a smart cookie" - probably because I was reading before I was four-years-old. I can remember sitting at the kitchen table reading the comics to her while she prepared supper. We were a large poor family - six children stay-at-home mom, farm-worker dad, etc. Unfortunately, there were not many books, magazines, newspapers, etc., available for me to read; we didn't live close enough to a town, nor were any of the towns big enough, to have a library. When we finally moved close to Kirksville, I was seven, and my mom signed me up for a library card. I checked out seven books for one week and I was the happiest person in the world.

Clarksville had a library that was started in 1880's by Alpha Literacy Society - what a lucky little town! In 1896, the newly organized GFWC Fort-nightly Reading Club campaign for a better library more books and beginner building, $300 was raised; more books and land were bought to build a library, which still stands and is used today. It doesn't have a bathroom or running water, nor is it a public library, although that is the name of it - Clarksville Public Library. It is still open, unfortunately because of caused "by appointment" only. Approximately two years ago, the furnace had to be replaced, and most of the funds were used for that purchase. Today, two members of the board for the library have paid personally the utility bills and the insurance.

Now, I don't think that if a person agrees to sit on the board of directors for the Clarksville Public Library, it should be his/her responsibility to personally pay the bills. Since the Library is a private library - that means no tax-base is used to support it - all of us in the community should take out a membership ($5 per membership), and either make it a personal contribution (donation!), or develop/support a fund-raiser.

We can do this if we are all willing to do it together. And, also volunteer to be on the board. Please please - help a 'smart cookie' to have an opportunity.

Sincerely,
Mary D. Dockery

Colorectal Cancer Patient Finds Support In Hannibal Cancer Care

Vickie Clark of New London is a loving grandmother who enjoys virtual visits with her grandchildren located states away.

The joy her grandchildren bring is the highlight of her days. She also enjoys spending time with her church family and her loving husband.

In the fall of 2023, Vickie began noticing that she had lost weight and was just not looking or feeling like herself. Vickie's husband, Keith Clark, was worried something was wrong and suggested that Vickie go in for the colonoscopy that she had been putting off for a while. With her sweet grandchildren and family in mind, Vickie and Keith traveled to Columbia, Missouri, where she had her colonoscopy. Following her colonoscopy and scans, Vickie was diagnosed with stage 3 colorectal cancer. The diagnosis was scary and upsetting; however, Vickie and Keith have faced cancer challenges before. Keith is a prostate cancer survivor. He underwent treatment at Hannibal Regional and wanted Vickie to receive the same compassionate care he received during his cancer journey. Keith shares, "The cancer team at Hannibal Regional is incredibly kind, caring, and professional. They take care of every need, and I could not ask for a better support system."

Nervous with her new diagnosis, Vickie first met with Dr. Joseph Bean, Radiation Oncologist at the James E. Cary Cancer Center. Vickie's doctors in Columbia had come up with a plan of care for her and Dr. Bean was able to facilitate this plan along with Dr. Kevin Palka, Hematologist and Oncologist with Hannibal Regional Cancer Institute. Vickie's plan would include Total Neoadjuvant Therapy which consists of a combination of radiation and chemo therapy followed by surgery. Vickie needed radiation every day for five and a half weeks. The nurses in Dr. Bean's office helped Vickie to navigate this first part of her cancer journey. With daily appointments, she would be able to stay close to home, making it much easier and less stressful for her and her husband.

While receiving radiation treatments, Vickie was also taking oral Chemotherapy and saw Dr. Palka regularly for follow-up care. With the love that Vickie has for her family, it was important for her to understand if colorectal cancer would be something that her children and grandchildren would need to worry about in their futures. Dr. Palka performed genetic testing to see if her cancer was hereditary. Fortunately, Vickie's cancer was not genetic. Dr. Palka worked with Vickie on her plan of care and it was decided that following radiation she would start chemotherapy.

The connection Vickie has made with the team taking care of her has become very important to Vickie. She shares, "My heart is filled with so much love for Dr. Bean, Dr. Palka and all of the wonderful nurses and radiation therapists. They all have helped me navigate my cancer journey, making it less scary. They all have worked together as a team to take care of everything I needed from insurance, to gas cards, answering questions, and just being there for me. The nurses have made my care so seamless; they would set appointments up so I would go to radiation with Dr. Bean and when I was finished, I would go directly to see Dr. Palka without having to worry about appointment times. Along with my family, friends, and my church family, my cancer team is my support system, and I am eternally grateful for each of them."

Vickie has finished radiation and is continuing chemotherapy with Dr. Palka. Her doctors have all expressed to her that her cancer is curable, and she is doing well with her treatment. Vickie is feeling great, more like herself, and begins each day joyously. "I am forever thankful for my husband; he saved my life by pushing me to get a colonoscopy. If I would have waited, it could have been much worse and might not have been treatable. My advice is: whatever it might be—a mammogram, colonoscopy, prostate screening— just get the test done. It just might save your life."

To learn more about prevention, treatment or risk of developing colorectal cancer, call to schedule an appointment with one of the gastroenterologists at Hannibal Regional Medical Group (573) 629-3500.

In Tymes Of Old, Rosemary Used Lavender To Freshen The Air

Long before plug-in air fresheners and scented candles, people used plants to make their homes more livable by masking unpleasant odors.

Herbs served that purpose very well and frequently were strewn over floors, said University of Missouri Extension horticulturist David Trinklein. Walking on herbs' aromatic foliage released their fragrances. Additionally, many herbs were thought to possess medicinal properties and were used to treat various ailments. Today, herbs add zest to our diet as well as fragrance to our lives, and they are becoming increasingly popular with gardeners.

Botanically, an herb is a non-woody plant that dies back to the ground at the end of each growing season. A more functional definition is a plant whose leaves, stems or seeds are used for their aromatic, culinary or medicinal properties.

People have used herbs for thousands of years in interesting ways, Trinklein said. The ancient Greeks treated stomach problems with parsley and used sweet marjoram as a tonic. The Romans used dill to crown heroes and purify the air in their banquet halls. Scottish highlanders used thyme to impart strength and courage as well as to prevent nightmares. In medieval France, babies were rubbed with artemisia to protect them from the cold. Early immigrants to the United States brought herbs with them, and they found many familiar herbs growing in the wild in their new country. Herb gardens were an essential part of the pioneer homestead.

Homegrown herbs became less common as modern grocery stores provided easy access to a growing variety of fresh and dried herbs. But many gardeners today are rediscovering the satisfaction derived from growing herbs in their gardens or in containers, said Trinklein.

There are more than 70 herbs that fall into into one or more of four categories: culinary, aromatic, ornamental and medicinal.

Culinary herbs such as basil, parsley and chives add flavor and appeal to food. Aromatic herbs include lavender, lovage and mint and are used to scent linens and clothing as well as for potpourris and sachets. Most are members of the Lamiaceae (or mint) family and produce strong-scented, volatile oils that last a relatively long time after harvesting and drying.

Ornamental herbs such as catmint have brightly colored flowers and are used in the garden for visual interest. Finally, medicinal herbs such as feverfew and angelica are said to have properties useful for treating illness or relieving pain. Modern science has confirmed therapeutic benefits for a few of these herbs, but the medicinal value of many of them is probably overstated. In fact, a few, such as comfrey, can be dangerous if consumed and should only be used topically.

Most herbs can be grown from seed, though a few, such as peppermint, must be vegetatively propagated. As a general rule, herbs will grow in any location suitable for vegetable production, Trinklein said. Herbs need well-drained soil for successful production. Incorporate plenty of well-decomposed organic matter into the soil before planting to improve its porosity.

Herbs need only modest fertility; high fertility leads to excessive vegetative growth and poor flavor or aroma, he said. Most herbs appreciate at least six to eight hours of direct sunlight and adequate amounts of water throughout the growing season.

Few diseases and insects trouble herbs. If pests become a problem on culinary herbs, use a pesticide labeled for food crops.

Sending Congratulations To The Van-Far High School 2024 Graduates

Hosta Steps Out Of The Shadows In 2024

Perhaps no plant brightens a shady area more than hosta, said University of Missouri Extension horticulturist David Trinklein. The hardy perennial that thrives in shade is low-maintenance and easy to grow.

"It is little wonder, then, why hosta was selected by the National Garden Bureau as its Perennial of the Year for 2024," said Trinklein. Its lush foliage comes in a variety of sizes, shapes, colors and variegation. Hosta is one of a few plants that brings attractive color to the shadiest of garden corners.

Horticulturists estimate there are more than 4,000 cultivars of hostas, he said. They range from miniatures such as "Baby Bunting" and "Tiny Tears," which are several inches in diameter when mature, to giants such as "Sum and Substance" and "Emperor Wu," with a height and spread of 48 inches.

Hostas usually fall into one of five categories based on height or leaf color, Trinklein said. These are dwarf, edger, ground cover, background and specimen-hostas of any height with colorful or unique leaves.

Leaf color varies between solid colors of green, blue and yellow, or variegated in any combination of these colors. Most variegated cultivars bear dark leaves with light or colored edges. A few cultivars are viridescent, changing from lighter to darker shades during the growing season. Others are lutescent and change from green to yellow. A very few change from yellow to white, a trait known as albescence.

Hostas also can be classified according to their leaf shape (strap, lance, egg, heart and circular) and leaf surface (flat, rugose, cupped-rugose, wavy undulate, contorted, piecrust or furrowed).

Like daylilies, hostas bear a compound inflorescence known as a scape. Individual flowers on the spike are lavender or white, depending upon cultivar. Some flowers are delightfully fragrant, adding further appeal to this attractive plant, said Trinklein.

Although most consider hosta a shade plant, relatively few cultivars thrive in deep, heavy shade. Most prefer several hours of morning sun followed by afternoon shade, or broken patches of dappled sunlight. Hostas' aggressive roots compete well with the roots of most tree species.

Generally, blue-leaved cultivars need a shadier exposure. Green- and yellow-leaved cultivars can tolerate more sun. Most sun-tolerant cultivars will exhibit some leaf-edge burn if exposed to afternoon sun and Midwestern summer heat.

Some hosta cultivars take years to develop into a mature clump. Therefore, good soil preparation is a sound investment. Hostas prefer rich loam soil high in organic matter and slightly acidic. Good drainage also is important. Mix about 4 inches of organic matter deeply into the soil to prepare average soil. Well-rotted manure, compost, leaf mold or peat are good sources of organic matter. Plant in a 12-inch-deep hole that is 1 1/2 times the cultivar's mature diameter.

Divide dormant hostas for more plants, or buy established plants in nursery containers. To plant, remove the hosta from its container and free any tangled roots. Put the plant in the hole so that soil covers the roots at the same level as they were in the nursery container. Remember that soil settles when watered. If planting dormant divisions, soak the roots in water for about 30 minutes before planting. Always water thoroughly after planting.

Gardening experts disagree about the need to fertilize hostas. Some insist that most garden soils contain sufficient nutrients, making additional fertilizer unnecessary. Others maintain that hostas need more fertilizer. This group says to add a granular, complete fertilizer such as 12-12-12 or 5-10-5 early in spring, followed by two more applications about six weeks apart. Apply according to label directions and consider the cultivar's stature and vigor. Do not fertilize hostas after mid-July. This could stimulate late-season growth and prevent the plant from hardening for winter, Trinklein said.

Hostas need about 1 1/2 inches of water per week during summer. Burned leaf tips and drooping leaves are a telltale sign of too little water. If extra irrigation is required, water early in the morning to allow leaves to dry quickly.

Increase your hosta numbers by dividing the clump early in the spring when the shoots start to emerge from the soil. Most cultivars need about five years of undisturbed growth to establish the clump.

Slugs and snails typically chew small, round holes to feed on the leaves of plants. They leave a dried trail of slime as they move from one spot to another. Control slugs and snails by using poison baits containing measuro, metaldehyde or iron phosphate. Place pans filled with beer in the garden. Pests will crawl into the pan and drown. Deer also love hostas. Repellents, electrical fences, guard dogs and motion detectors control deer, to greater or lesser effectiveness.

Other than foliar nematodes, hostas are relatively disease-free. Hosta virus X (HVX) is a relatively new virus that has been getting a lot of publicity as of late, said Trinklein. Cultivars with light-colored leaves may show blue or green markings that usually follow the vein of the leaf into the surrounding tissue. This results in a mottled appearance. Leaves also may look lumpy or puckered.

Symptoms on cultivars with dark-colored leaves are harder to detect and may appear as light-colored mottling instead of colored streaks. HVX spreads by mechanically transferring from an infected plant to a healthy one, especially during propagation. There is no cure, and gardeners should rogue out infected plants, Trinklein said.

It is difficult to choose which of the 4,000 hosta cultivars to plant. Look for a cultivar that has won an award given by the American Hosta Society or the American Hosta Growers' Hosta of the Year Award, said Trinklein. "Once considered a 'green filler' for shady areas, hostas are now the stars of shady landscapes," he said.

2024 Rotary Golf Outing

SUBMITTED BY
EDNA DOLBEARE

The 2023 First Annual Rotary Scholarship Golf Tournament (RSGT) dawned 60 degrees, sunshine, and a light breeze! ... The 2024 Second Annual RSGT was not quite the same – more like 50 degrees, thunder & lightning, wind, and intermittent downpours!

But did that stop the dedicated golfers who signed up for this community fundraiser?

Well, maybe a few, but 28 dedicated die-hard faithful players came out and enjoyed nine (slightly soggy) holes of golf, a great meal, and a time of comradery that made the day worth all the effort!

Hole sponsors got us going early in the planning by committing $100 per hole. Include are these generous local businesses: Ashley Jenkins Insurance Agency, LLC - Shelter Insurance, Black Bear Cider Co., Clay and Sally Logan and son, John, Chiropractic Health Center, Dr. Eric Gearing, Dyno Nobel Inc., First State Insurance Agency, Brenda Miller, Great River Road B&B, Charlie and Bev Cogar, Hannibal Regional Healthcare System Inc., HNB Bank, Jackson Jones, in memory of Ray Dolbeare by Betty Dolbeare, KJFM radio, Thom, Gordon and Tannis Sanders, Lynn's Heritage House, Jenna Loveless, People's Bank & Trust, Ben Logan, Pike County Memorial Hospital, The Gatherings @ 601, The Pierre, Heather White, Twin Pikes Roastery, Ryan Cornell, White Insurance Agency, and Brian White

We also want to recognize the following donors: cash donation from MASH direct to scholarship fund, can koozies from White Insurance, Ashley Jenkins Insurance, and People Bank & Trust, sodas from The Pierre, and golf tees from Kayla Caldwell Edward Jones Investments.

Of course, every event is made better by the food and ours was certainly no exception. Tom Leake, owner of The Angry Pig food truck, brought us a delicious meal of barbecue pork, smoked brisket, and homemade macaroni and cheese.

I noticed more than a few might have come back for seconds, which was perfect because we had planned for more. Top this off with a great variety of homemade (or at least home-baked!) cookies, and everyone's tummy was happy!

We would be remiss if we did not recognize the Pike County Country Club for the beautiful venue on which to play, eat, and fellowship. The board of directors of the club, some who joined us for golf, helped in determining how to proceed due to the stormy weather.

Jenny Asquith, who stocks and serves at the bar, kept everyone well-hydrated and supplied in that area! And despite the rain, the picturesque course drained easily, was mowed impeccably, and provided just the right amount of challenge for some of us less-than-average golfers! The PCCC is truly a hidden gem of Pike County, MO.

Members involved in planning and executing the event: Mark and Sally Haddock, Greg and Edna Dolbeare, Brittany Taylor, Linda Beer, Alice Holtzhauser, Ashley Jenkins, Heather White, Brenda Miller, Tessa Gearing, and Bev and Charlie Cogar.

Now, to the folks who contributed so much to the success of the golf outing, the participants. We had 28 players who braved the wind & rain, and, thanks to a few mulligans and pieces of string, our winning team managed to have a nine-hole score of eight under par, with two more teams tied right below at seven under.

First place went to the team of Kelly Henderson, Karl Dewey, Tommy Wallace, and Daniel Branstetter. Tied for second was the Shelter Insurance Team of Tim Jenkins, Jared Henderson, Coleman Chamberlain, and Mike Rieck, along with the team of Rodney Dolbeare, Greg and Edna Dolbeare, and Randy Borrowman.

Hitting the longest drive for men on hole 5 was Tim Jenkins and for women on hole 3 was Tannis Sanders; hitting closest to the pin on hole 2 was David Onnen with no ladies hitting the green on hole 9.

Also playing in tournament were Mark Haddock, David Onnen, John Wichterman, and Dennis Babbitt; Sally Haddock, Jackie Onnen, Zella Eliason, and Tannis Sanders; PB&T team of Ben Logan, Jim Ross, Daryle Wallace, and Derrick Branstetter; and a fun-loving team from the Hannibal Regional Healthcare System consisting of Kenny Kallash, Linda Wiley, Jenny Potter, and Wil Norviel.

But now, to highlight the greatest part of playing in a local fundraiser tournament: every team or person who won a cash prize gave back his/her money to the Louisiana Rotary to go into our scholarship fund. We recognize that every business and each individual has many requests for donations. So to have you not only pay to play, but also give back your winnings, you are the exceptional supporters of this community!

So, despite the less-than-ideal weather and turnout, almost $4,000 was added to the Rotary fund designated to future scholarships for some of each year's graduating seniors from Louisiana High School. We simply could not do this without amazing people like the ones listed above on our team.
